READING:

Steven Spielberg, the famous film director, has made a significant contribution to the world of modern entertainment. From Jaws to War Horse, Spielberg has always delighted his audiences.

Spielberg was born in Ohio, USA, in 1946. When he was growing up, he spent a lot of time going to the cinema. The first film he ever saw was Cecil B. DeMille's The Greatest Show on Earth (1952). It had a great effect on his life and he fell in love with the magic of film-making.

As a child, Spielberg began using his father's home film camera to make adventure films. While he was selling tickets to his friends to watch his films at his house, his sister Annie was selling popcorn! At age 13, he took part in a film competition with his 40-minute film, Escape to Nowhere, and won an award. Three years later, he wrote and directed a science fiction film called Firelight. This film made a profit of $1 at the local cinema.

Spielberg didn't study film-making at university, but that didn't stop him from making films. When he was 17, he often worked, unpaid, at Universal Studios in California. In 1968, he made the short film Amblin. It was very successful and Spielberg won several awards. He also got a seven-year contract with Universal Studios, and his dream of being a professional film-maker came true.

In 1974, Spielberg made his first full-length film, Sugarland Express, and won an award at the Cannes Film Festival. A year later, he directed the action thriller Jaws. It was a huge success and won three Oscars at the 1976 Academy Awards. Since then, Spielberg has produced many other action, historical, science fiction and war films. He continues to be one of the most creative e film-makers in the world.
